

Pulse

dining
the arts
going out
daily grind

New York State Senator Kenneth P. LaValle (left) congratulates Long Island Compost President Charles Vigliotti (center) on being honored by the Long Island Farm Bureau (LIFB) for his environmental efforts and support of Long Island's farming industry. Also pictured is LIFB Executive Director Joseph Gergela.

Long Island Farm Bureau (LIFB) honored Long Island Compost President and CEO Charles Vigliotti at its 89th annual dinner dance last month with its "Friend of Agriculture" award for Vigliotti's support of Long Island agriculture, his dedication to the environment through "on-farm" composting, and his promotion of organic products in the marketplace. Long Island Compost is Long Island's leading provider of organic materials, services and products. Its state-of-the art composting process involves turning organic materials into superior products for gardens, and keeping the materials out of landfills.

Good People Doing Good Things.